More Fish From The Ocean

TO men like Mr. Wong For-yu, the blind man who was given a new shrimp boat yesterday by the Society for the Blind, the prospect of a new fisheries research vessel for Hong-kong may mean little or nothing. But the Cape St. Mary, herself a gift to the Hongkong Government, and the subject of a vote in the Legislative Council on Wednesday, promises to be an important aid to the Colony's fishing fleet generally, though obviously its size, range and past record suggest it is going to be more help to deep-sea than inshore fishermen.

Hongkong's fishery problems have been clearly emphasised in the last two years. Not only is demand growing with the increasing number of mouths to feed, but a year or two ago China made fishing difficult in waters our fleet has traditionally used. Chiefly affected was the Colony's inshore fleet which was confined to the already over-fished local waters. There is therefore a need to ensure supplies by placing greater dependence on more reliable areas.

BUT this will have to be done gradually to avoid upsetting the local industry. Most of Hongkong's fishermen are inshore men and their craft likewise are limited in their sphere and scale of operations. We urged earlier this year the creation of scholarships to convert the most enterprising inshore junk captains to mechanised Western-style trawlers. But in whatever scheme the Colony adopts, the role to be played by the Cape St. Mary will be important.

She will be used by University scientists to locate new fishing grounds in offshore waters. She will probably also survey deep-sea fishing grounds to determine the areas in which the various fish resources are in greatest abundance. The present research vessel, the Alister Hardy, will in all probability be handed over to Government to relate research to the needs of local fishermen.

MAN SET FIRE TO MOSQUITO NETS, GAOLED FOR 5 YEARS

Two Women And Five Children
Trapped By Blaze

A man who set fire to mosquito nets covering sleeping people in a house in Taipo was sent to gaol for five years in the Supreme Court today. On a second charge of assaulting a woman, Mr Justice A. D. Scholes sentenced the man, Tam Yuk-tin, to six months in gaol.

'DIED' FOR FOUR MINUTES—LIVED

London, Aug. 20. A patient in a Glasgow hospital "died" for four minutes and came alive again without aid, the British Medical Journal revealed here today.

Failure To Recover
Satellite
Capsule

Vandenberg Air Base, Aug. 20. The Air Force failed today to recover a 300-pound capsule ejected from the Discoverer VI satellite.

Two previous recovery tries from earlier Discoverer satellites also failed.

Typhoon Iris
Will Bring More Rain

Typhoon Iris, now south-east of northern Luzon, is expected to cross the Philippine Islands into the China Sea tomorrow morning, a spokesman at the Royal Observatory said this morning.

Mr D. O'R. Mayne, Senior Crown Counsel, told the court that a woman, Lau Chiu, who employed Tam had reprimanded him and threatened to fire him, and that motivated the offence.

At about 3.50 a.m. on May 31 at 5 Hei Yuen Street, Taipo market, there were three people beside Tam sleeping on the ground floor of the building, and seven people, including five children, sleeping in the cockloft.

All were covered by mosquito nets.

Mr Mayne said Tam, using blazing newspapers and matches, set fire to the mosquito nets on the ground floor. The alarm was given, and the sleepers escaped.

Cockloft Blocked
Meanwhile, Tam had gone upstairs to the cockloft where Lau, his employer, was sleeping, with her sister and five children.

He closed the trapdoor covering the stairway and put a heavy sack of rice on it, blocking the entrance and exit from the cockloft.

Hongkong Owner's Big Race Triumph

By A China Mail Reporter

The wife of a prominent Hongkong businessman has scored a major triumph. A horse she owns has won the famous Gimcrack Stakes.

It is only the second time in the 103-year-old history of the race that a woman owner has won.

Yesterday's winner was Mrs J. R. Mullion, wife of the Chairman of Harley, Mullion and Co., ship managers and valuers of Hongkong, and a director of a number of leading Hongkong firms.

The Mullions were at York to see their filly Paddy's Sister romp home to a three lengths victory in a field of ten two-year-olds.

The race is regarded as one of the most important two-year-old events of the season.

PRIZE MONEY
The win means a prize of £4,625 for Mrs Mullion. It also means that she will be guest of honour at the Gimcrack Club dinner in York on December 15 where she will make a speech. If she follows the usual procedure this will mean a discussion of "turk politics".

Reuter quoted Mrs Mullion after the race as saying: "This is one of the greatest days of my life".

She said that although she and her husband would be in Hongkong during December, they would certainly return to attend the dinner.

Mrs J. R. Mullion, successful race-horse owner, pictured with her husband and family photographed earlier this year going on leave.

The only other woman owner to win the six-furlong race was Mrs E. S. Foster, of England, whose Dudacron scored in 1958.

The race is named after the great racehorse, Gimcrack who covered 22½ miles in an hour in France in 1776.

FAVOURITE
Mrs Mullion's horse was trained by Mr Paddy Prendergast in Ireland and was ridden by Australian jockey George Moore. The horse was a firm favourite at 11 to 4 on.

Major Outbreak Of Fighting In Laos Predicted

Vientiane, Aug. 20. The Laotian Defence Secretary, Colonel Phoumi Nosavan, told reporters tonight that fighting with pro-Communist rebels was raging daily at Phaphet, only 18 miles west of the town of Sam Neua, capital of Sam Neua province.

He said the Government could continue to hold the town of Sam Neua, but the Communists were making great progress.

The Army Deputy Chief of Staff, General Amkhua, who is the provincial commander, is reported to have told a group of reporters who visited the town yesterday that the rebels were throwing a ring round the province, and were on the move round the entire perimeter except for a gap in the southwest.

REBEL OFFENSIVE
An Army communique today predicted that Communist rebels would probably unleash a major offensive to retake the two northern provinces of Sam Neua and Phong Saly.

Plan To Prevent Flooding In New Territories

The Government today announced plans to prevent flooding in a low-lying part of the New Territories badly hit by heavy rains and floods in recent years.

The new water course will replace the old winding stream which became clogged with silt and sand during the heavy rainstorms in June.

The present contract also calls for the building of 5,500 feet of main road running parallel with the new stream course. There will be a footpath on one side.

Distributors
Want Films
Certified

By ANTHONY FULLER
China Mail Film Correspondent

Hongkong film distributors are expected to meet the Hongkong censor board shortly and ask that films to be shown in Hongkong be issued with certificates similar to those of the British Censorship Board.

If this is agreed to, it will mean that all Hongkong films will be marked "G"—for general exhibition, "A"—for Adults only, and "X"—for horror. Arbitrary decisions taken recently by the Board has puzzled local film distributors.

One example—"Love Is My Profession"—which has been shown and been well received in all the capitals of the world.

"Yesterday's Enemy," a powerful anti-war film, made around an incident of the World War II Burma campaign, has now been released for distribution to the Hongkong public, following a ban imposed by the Hongkong Censor Board.

Rome, Aug. 20. Russia has asked China for 100,000 Chinese workers to help speed up the lagging Soviet seven-year plan.

An Italian News Agency which specialises in Communist affairs said this today.

The Agenzia Continentale said that despite Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's claims that economic and industrial norms were ahead of the plan, the programme is actually lagging.

Quoting "reliable sources," the agency said Moscow had already asked Peking for 100,000 workers and that the figure might be increased to 500,000 by the spring of 1961.

PERSONALLY
Negotiations on the labour force will be carried out personally by Mr Khrushchev during a forthcoming visit to Peking, the agency said.

RAF JET BOMBER SEA CRASH

London, Aug. 20. A RAF Victor jet bomber crashed into the sea with five men aboard, it was reported in London tonight.

The plane was believed to have come down in the Atlantic off the southern coast of Ireland, where distress flares were spotted. No survivors or wreckage were sighted by rescue planes.—AFP.

Bride
Kidnapped
Before
Wedding

London, Aug. 20. A 22-year-old bride, Rosemary Gray, was whisked away by two unidentified men in a black car this morning as she was about to enter the church for her wedding.

Only the best man saw the bride being kidnapped, but his warning cries went unheeded by the wedding party and guests, who thought he was joking. By the time they realised that the bride had really disappeared, it was too late to help. The bridegroom, James Waddell, 25, fainted.

Later today Miss Gray appeared at the police station and recounted her adventures to the police for an hour. Her story was not revealed.

A few minutes before midnight on Thursday night Rosemary Gray was married to James Waddell by a Protestant clergyman in the drawing-room of a private house.

The police was pursuing their investigation, but had not yet discovered who had kidnapped the bride.—AFP.

RADIOACTIVITY REPORTED IN WEST INDIES

London, Aug. 20.

THE chief scientific officer of Britain's Ministry of Supply, Mr David Evans, left here by air late tonight to investigate reported radioactivity in the West Indies.

At London Airport, he said: "I can't tell you what is going on. The Colonial Office asked the Ministry to investigate and I was merely told to stand by and now I am going."

The duty officer at the Colonial Office stated: "Mr Evans is leaving for Trinidad at the request of the Trinidad Government and with the approval of the United States Government to investigate reports of radioactivity arising from the operation of the radar tracking station at the U.S. base at Chaguaramas."

Non-Nuclear

The Colonial Office spokesman added: "The type of radioactivity is non-nuclear. Before he left tonight, Mr Evans said: 'I have with me a number of radio instruments but no Geiger counters. I shall stay in Trinidad until I have got to the bottom of it.'—Reuter.

17TH CENTURY SHIP BEING REFLOATED

Stockholm, Aug. 20.

The 17th century Swedish man-of-war, Vasa, was today eased out of the mud at the bottom of Stockholm harbour where she had lain, 100 feet down, since 1628.

Lifting of the Vasa, which sank on her maiden voyage, is being carried out with a cradle of 12 thick cables. A special museum is planned for the vessel, which will be brought to the surface in 12 stages.—Reuter.

Troops using the new rifle will include those engaged on guard duties at Buckingham Palace and St James's Palace, Tower of London duties and pickets at the Bank of England.

The FN rifle has been in use for some time by most British troops serving overseas.—Reuter.

The After Effects Of Swallowing A Mouse

Denver, Aug. 20.

A Denver woman who said she swallowed a live mouse last Friday said today she never would have gone to a hospital if she had known it would have caused so much commotion.

Mrs Florence Hill has been deluged with telephone calls and stacks of mail from all over the nation. Most of the curious inquiries wanted to know if the story were true.

"If I were a young person, it might be different," she said indignantly, "but a woman 67 years old isn't going to be telling lies like this."

Boots Growled

The "publicity" started the day after her pet dog, Boots, awakened her from her sleep with his growling. She looked up and saw a two inch mouse jumping around near her bed.

She said it was standing on top of her clock. She opened her mouth to scream and the mouse jumped in and wriggled its way down her throat.

The next day one of her friends persuaded her to go to Denver General Hospital.

Mrs Hill said she stayed at the hospital for 12 hours. Doctors admitted they were amazed at her story but said they had no reason to doubt it. They kept her in hospital but when she suffered no ill effects they sent her home.

Phone Started

The next day she said her telephone started ringing.

"Most of the calls were from people telling me I was a liar," she said.

"I finally quit answering my telephone. Then the mail began coming in. I got letters and cards from everywhere. 'I find the entire affair hideous and at the same time comical,' the widow said, 'but I never want to see another mouse again as long as I live.'—UPI.

MAN HURT IN VAN ACCIDENT

A bicyclist, carrying wire chicken coops, was sandwiched between two commercial vans in the main street of Yuen Long, at 11 a.m. yesterday.

The bicycle and chicken coops were damaged and the man injured in the stomach.

The bicycle was travelling on the outside of a parked van when another van coming on from behind suddenly swerved and ploughed the bicyclist against the parked van.

Four Stowaways Can Leave Their Ship After 5 Months Aboard

New York, Aug. 20.

Four Yugoslav refugees who sailed the oceans for five months as stowaways, seeking a country that would take them in, were today granted visas to go to Austria, it was learned here.

The refugees, three men and a pregnant woman, the wife of one of the men, were expected to step ashore for the first time in five months tomorrow in New York from the Danish freighter Olaf Bjørke which has been carrying them.

From there, they were to be flown to Vienna.

The New York representative of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, which had intervened on their behalf, visited the Yugoslavs today aboard the vessel.

Their Problem

He said later that the four had left Yugoslavia illegally in 1956 and 1957.

After a first stay in Trieste, Italy, they reached West Germany, then Italy again, and finally France, where they received temporary visiting permits.

When these expired, they secretly boarded the Olaf Bjørke at Le Havre, last March 25.

But once they were on the ship, they could not get off again, because they lacked proper papers and none of the countries where the ship stopped would take them.

The woman's pregnancy made the situation urgent and the High Commission intervened.—AFP.

Boeing 707s To Be Improved

New York, Aug. 20.

The Boeing Aircraft Company today announced a number of design improvements for the Boeing 707 jet airliner, adding that many 707s now in use or on order would be converted to the new version.

A Boeing 707—biggest pure-jet passenger plane in operation—crashed in a field near Claverton, New York, last Saturday, killing all five members of the crew. There were no passengers aboard.

The plane has also been in a series of minor incidents recently, generally connected with the landing gear, and the U.S. Civil Aviation Board has ordered all planes in service to be carefully examined.—Reuter.

Princess Alexandra Invites 4 Airmen The Lowest In The Force

Brisbane, Aug. 20.

At the request of Princess Alexandra of Kent, four other ranks of the Royal Australian Air Force have been invited to tomorrow night's Royal Ball at Brisbane City Hall—without partners.

It was presumed they will dance with the Princess. The invitations went out today to the four men at Amberley R.A.A.F. station near here today.

Three of them are airmen—lowest rank in the force—and the youngest, at 20, is younger than the Princess, who is 25.—Reuter.

Valuable Crucifix Found After Theft

Rovigo, Aug. 20.

Police last night found a stolen $160,000 crucifix wrapped in old newspapers in a poultry yard.

The find climaxed a "crack-down" on a gang which specialised in stealing ancient art work from churches throughout northern Italy.

Four alleged members of the ring were arrested over the past week in various towns and charges were brought against another four.

The 17th century ivory crucifix, almost two feet tall, was stolen in full daylight on July 8 from St Lazarus church in Piacenza.

Its disappearance was not noticed until the following day.—UPI.

Yellowstone Hit By New Quakes

LAKE MAY CAUSE DISASTER

West Yellowstone, Mont., Aug. 20. Five more earthquakes jolted the Yellowstone area today, one of them strong enough to cause people to run from buildings and to heighten fears of new landslides.

They brought fresh concern about the growing lake behind the motor slide of Monday night. Officials said it had the potential of another disaster.

The shocks were minor as compared with the big Monday night quake that set off landslides and hurled spectators. There were no reports of new damage.

The third shock of the day, at 11:30 a.m. EST (1030 GMT) frightened a number of persons into running into the open. The fifth was about 1:30 p.m.—UPI.

Lancashire Scrapping 45,000 Looms

Manchester, Aug. 20. The Cotton Board today announced that the target of 45,000 looms to be scrapped under the Lancashire cotton industry re-organization scheme has now been reached.

The Government is to contribute three-fifths of the cost of compensating firms. The remaining third will be raised by compulsory levies.—Reuters.

Woman Inventor On Fraud Charge

Como, Italy, Aug. 20.

Miss Neera Tomasini, who dazzled industrialists and Premier Antonio Segni with her "atom spray" for preserving food, was in gaol here today on suspicion of fraud.

Police said the 52-year-old housewife promised deliveries of her spray guns to industrialists and merchants, allegedly accepting cash advances for them, but never delivering.

But for four years her invention has been the talk of the Italian kitchen and the pride of the press.

She was the only private exhibitor at the Milan International Fair atomic pavilion earlier this year. Crowds ignored isotopes and reactor models to see Miss Tomasini's atom spray which every housewife was supposed to be able to use in her kitchen.

Police said Premier Segni congratulated her when he visited the exhibition. Pictures of Miss Tomasini and the Premier were featured in Italian newspapers and magazines.

The Tomasini spray was simply directed at the white vapor-like cloud of "atoms" from a canister at fruit, vegetables, fish, or spaghetti. The atoms preserved the food and did away with the need for refrigeration or canning.

But dealers from Holland, Swiss cheese producers, German flower growers, and shippers and traders from all over Europe went to see Miss Tomasini. They allegedly were promised great quantities of the spray guns and laid down cash in return.—UPI.

Dalai Lama's Photograph Forbidden

New Delhi, Aug. 20.

The Chinese authorities have forbidden the display of photographs of the Dalai Lama in Tibet reports reaching here indicated today.

The Dalai Lama was being described as an "Indian imperialist stooge" by the Chinese who were confiscating pictures and photographs of the Tibetan spiritual leader.

At the same time the reports said the Chinese have put up posters describing Ladakh, Sikkim and Bhutan and parts of Nepal as parts of "Outer Tibet."

Liberation of these areas has been called for, the reports added.

SITUATION TENSE
The situation in Lhasa remained tense and Tibetans have been forbidden from receiving treatment in the 40-year-old Indian hospital there. Although conducting an anti-India campaign the Chinese authorities were said to be keeping silent about all Indian protests.

The Chinese Foreign Ministry has turned down a request from Indian Ambassador G. Parthasarathy to see Premier Chou En-lai.—AFP.

Maxims' Albert Dies

Paris, Aug. 20.

Albert Blazer, universally known as "Albert," maitre d'hotel at the world-famous Paris restaurant of Maxims, died today at the age of 70.

Albert, who was born in Switzerland, had suffered from an incurable and painful disease for some time. He died in hospital.

He last worked at Maxims on December 9 last year. He had been there since 1934. Albert was familiar with all the crowned heads of Europe and all the stars of stage and screen, from Mistinguett to Brigitte Bardot. He had to a fine art the social standing of those who came to dine at the famous restaurant and dispensed with uncaring skill the exact degree of bonhomie or reserve warranted by the customers rank or fame.

A CELEBRITY

"I knew I was a celebrity the day that Albert called me by my first name," a famous lawyer said of him today. His special talent was in making a hundred persons a day believe, as they walked into Maxims' heavily carpeted, discreetly lit dining room, that the "best table" had been specially reserved for them.

When Albert visited New York in 1955 he was given a reception such as is usually reserved for heads of states. He was so much a part of the social life of Paris that when he held a reception at Maxims' to celebrate his 50 years of life in the French capital the Paris municipality conferred upon him its silver medal.—AFP.

Injured Climbers Rescued

Paris, Aug. 20.

Two English climbers were brought down to Chamonix tonight after falling 1,350 feet in a snow gully on the Mont Blanc massif today and surviving with only minor injuries.

They were taken to hospital suffering from shock and bruises and cuts caused by crampons. But hospital authorities said neither had broken bones. Hospital authorities identified them as Harry Scott, aged 28, from Eccles, Lancashire, and Gerald Hodgson, aged 20, of Leeds, Yorkshire.—Reuters.

Robbery By Franc

London, Aug. 20.

Two French students were each fined 22 today for putting a French 20 franc piece in an automatic ticket machine at Baker Street underground station.

Georges Manceur, 18, and Pierre Joux, 21, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty to obtaining six railway tickets and sixpence from a machine.

Railway detective Frank Cook said: "It has been general knowledge in France that you can bring these coins and they will operate these machines. It is a daily occurrence."

Addressing the students, the Magistrate, Mr. Edward Robey, said: "Please tell your friends in France that if any more come over here thinking they can put money in slot machines and get money more, they have got another thing coming."

The two were to return home today after a month's holiday in Britain.—China Mail Special.

Von Manteuffel Jury Retires

Dusseldorf, Aug. 20.

The trial of former Nazi tank general Heinz von Manteuffel recessed today to enable the jury to consider its verdict.

Von Manteuffel, one of the crack German generals in World War II, is charged with the manslaughter of a subordinate on the Russian front in World War II.

The prosecution has charged von Manteuffel was guilty of manslaughter when he ordered the young soldier shot for deserting his post under Russian fire.

Von Manteuffel faces a maximum sentence of six months if found guilty. The court is expected to announce its verdict tomorrow around noon.—UPI.

Princess Margaret Is 29 Today

Princess Margaret, younger sister of Queen Elizabeth and often called the world's most eligible girl, enters her thirtieth year tomorrow—and apparently as far from the altar as ever.

Racing Driver's -Widow Injured

New York, Aug. 20.

The widow of the racing driver, Marquis Alfonso de Portago, who was killed in a race two years ago, was injured in a traffic accident today when she was hit by a taxi on Fifth Avenue, another woman and a teen-age girl also were injured.

The Marquessa de Portago has been living here since her husband was killed in 1957. Roosevelt Hospital listed her condition as "not serious" although she was carried along on the taxi's hood for 50 feet.

The taxi, driven by Victor G. Simpson, 30, struck the woman, all pedestrians, when his brakes failed in rush hour traffic in the fashionable shopping district.—UPI.

New Elephant Incident 33 INJURED IN DASH FOR SAFETY

Kandy, Aug. 20.

A SACRED elephant stumbled to its knees during a Buddhist religious procession today, touching off a stampede by thousands of celebrants for the second day in a row.

Fourteen persons were killed last night when a sacred elephant ran amok after stepping on hot coals and crashed into hundreds of spectators. Police said 125 other persons were seriously injured and 61 sustained minor injuries.

With the memories of last night's tragedy still fresh in their minds, thousands of persons packed today when the elephant went down on its knees. Thirty-three persons were injured in the mad scramble to get out of the way of a possible charge by the huge beast.

The incident occurred during a procession to the Temple of the Tooth, where the relic of Buddha reposes, during the final day of the seven-day festival.

Full Inquiry

Home Minister T.B. Hingaratne promised Parliament a full inquiry into last night's tragedy.

Witnesses said the elephant became maddened after it stepped on hot coals that fell to the roadway from a marcher's torch. It lumbered through the crowd, which fled in terror. Many in the estimated crowd of 100,000 were trampled by others in the fight to get out of the beast's path.

Hundreds of men carrying torches flung them at the charging elephant, but this only further maddened the beast. The flying torches also added to the crowd's panic.

Police pumped scores of bullets into the elephant before it fell dead. It crashed on a new cart, crushing it.

Officials said it was the first time in more than 400 years of the Buddhist observances that lives had been lost.—UPI.

Snores From Below

Pisa, Aug. 20.

Dulcia Bracconi woke up her husband last night and told him to stop snoring.

The husband, Guido, woke up but the snoring continued.

The couple looked under the bed and found a man asleep—snoring.

They called the police, who hauled 24-year-old Sabino Giannelli off to prison.

Giannelli, released only a month ago from gaol where he served a four-year sentence for theft, said he entered the Bracconi house while the couple was out and hid under the bed when he heard them returning.

While they chatted and prepared for bed, he fell asleep.—UPI.

Battle For Harrods Continues

London, Aug. 20.

A battle for control of Harrods, fashionable London store where Queen Elizabeth often shops, reached new heat last night when the Debenhams group of stores increased their offer to a total value of £38,600,000.

Debenhams are fighting to win the store against rival bids from the Glasgow-based House of Fraser.

Last Monday Mr. Hugh Fraser raised his offer for Harrods to £35,200,000.—China Mail Special.

UK Govt Typists' Protest March

London, Aug. 20.

More than 1,000 typists employed by the Government marched through Whitehall's streets tonight demanding more pay.

The thousand-girl demonstration boiled out of a protest meeting of some 2,000 civil service typists and machine operators which was already being called "the second Whitehall rebellion."

The girls were up in arms about a pay increase asked late last month. They staged their first "rebellion" earlier this month in a mass protest meeting.

But that one was orderly and decorous, as befits the British Civil Service. Tonight's meeting erupted into something a good deal more public.

BANNERS

Armed with banners and noisemakers, the thousand girls streamed out of Westminster's Central Hall and across Parliament Square, flanked by Westminster Abbey and the Houses of Parliament.

Chanting "we want more pay," the girls streamed along the Thames Embankment and into Whitehall itself, site of most British Government offices.

Police prevented them from marching on Trafalgar Square. After a final rally outside the Board of Trade, the demonstrators broke up.—UPI.

Man-Made Lightning As A Weapon

Washington, Aug. 20.

A United States scientist said today Russia was studying the feasibility of using man-made lightning as a weapon and also possibly as a defense against missiles.

The scientist, Mr. Donald Ritchie of the Bendix Aviation Corporation, said the proposal to develop the ball of lightning in this way had been put forward by Mr. Gorbunov, head of the Soviet Institute of Energetics.

Mr. Ritchie, in an article in the Military and Rocket Magazine, said Mr. Ritchie had suggested generating "balls" of lightning in the skies above battle by focusing two huge parabolic antennas and creating an intense electro-magnetic field.

He said electro-magnetic energy fed from "the ground" would develop the ball of lightning and nuclear fusion would probably occur within the ball. "The ball could be easily moved through the sky by directing the ground antennas," Mr. Ritchie said.

"The effect of directing it at an aircraft or missile can be easily imagined."

"Such a Soviet weapon is not of course, far around the corner. The work in progress almost certainly is still in the research phase."

"But Russian science is rapidly expanding its understanding of electrical discharge, ball lightning, and lightning under water...."—Reuters.

Are you a deck-chair Don Juan?

THE odds are that you are a bit of a holiday Don Juan. Nothing serious, of course, but a bit of a Don Juan nevertheless. Maybe you don't believe it. Then we invite you—and your long-suffering wife—to take part in a ten-minute quiz to test your Romeo rating. Tick off your answers to the questions, honestly and fearlessly, then check up with the solutions at the foot of the article.

JUST TRY THIS TEST

1. You're sitting in a deck-chair on the beach, your wife at your elbow and the kids making sand-castles. A good-looking "cookie" passes in an elegant bikini. Would you:
- A—Remain engrossed in your newspaper.
B—Gaze at the "cookie" and hope your wife won't notice.
C—Draw your wife's attention to the bikini—and deplore the present-day trend towards near-nudity.
2. You're on the beach (with your wife, of course) and the cute next door has trouble with her deck-chair. Do you:
- A—Let her get on with it.
B—Rush across and help.
C—Nudge your wife and know darn well the wife will say: "I think you should go and help her, George."
3. You and your wife are having a wash-and-brush-up before the evening meal at the hotel. Do you:
- A—Wait for the wife and go down with her for a pre-dinner drink.
B—Rush your own dressing and dash downstairs for the odd word with the pretty barmaid who seems to understand you.
C—Hurry your wife, take her with you for a drink—and introduce her to the barmaid who's "such a good sort."
4. Your kids get friendly with two sets of children at your hotel. The mother of one set is a middle-aged brunette with plump lips. The other mother is a young blonde with a figure. Do you:
- A—Agree to team up with the family your kids like best.
B—Team up with the brunette's family (and hope you'll meet the blonde on the stairs some evening).
C—Convince your wife that the blonde's husband is a fellow who can be useful to you in business.
5. Your wife suggests she'll take the kids to a concert, and says: "Why don't you have an afternoon on your own?" Do you:
- A—Say "I'd love to go to the concert."
B—Tell her you'd rather stay at the hotel and write letters (knowing darn well the blonde is doing the same).
C—Take your binoculars and head for the nearest bathing pool.
6. It's fancy dress night at the camp. Your wife decides to go as Cleopatra, but you hear the girl at the next table say she's going as Eve. Do you:
- A—Go as Anthony.
B—Go as Adam.
C—Go as Autumn.
7. At the hotel breakfast time do you:
- A—Not bother to come down.
B—Slump to the table in your usual day-off attitude of grumpy newspaper-hungry silence.
C—Greet the waitress with your most devastating smile and jolly top-of-the-morning quips.
8. On the beach do you:
- A—Tell your son not to bother you—and then fall asleep in the deck-chair.
B—Help him to build a sand-castle—close to the pretty girl in the next deck-chair.
C—Suggest that you play ball together, and why not ask that little boy over there to join you with his sister (aged 18) as an extra fielder.
9. And when you play cricket on the sands do you:
- A—Allow your son to bowl you first ball just to encourage him.
B—Flog him all over the beach to show all the girls how skilful an athlete you are.
C—Drop the dolly catch that the sister hits to you just to show how much of a gentleman you are.

Just Fancy That!

NO one could find Fred Goodberry's ball after he drove off on Fulwell (Middlesex) golf course, playing for the artisans against club members.

There was a long search. Then Mr Edgar Best, playing for the members, put his hand in his trousers pocket. There was the golf ball.

Said Mr Best, who had been standing 200 yards from the tee: "I felt nothing at all. Nobody was more surprised than I."

Why the new rockets have made 'war nonsense'

London.
BRITAIN'S first rocket base—capable of hurling U.S. Thor rockets on to any enemy target within 1,500 miles—has just become operational.

It makes Britain the most advanced rocket retaliation point in the Nato area.

Does this bring new hope for the West? Or new danger of attack to Britain? Are even deadly H-bomb carrying rockets working for peace? Can this have any effect on Khrushchev's thinking?

Effective?

Wing Cmdr. Asher Lee, wartime Intelligence officer, and one of the world's leading authorities on Soviet rockets and air power, answered some of these questions when I met him.

Q.—Are these British-based Thors an effective deterrent today?

A.—No. Liquid-fuelled rockets, like the Thor, are notoriously unreliable. They do not always fire, or land, as predicted.

For a rocket to be effective, either as an attacking weapon or a deterrent it must be capable of wiping out every point from which the enemy can strike.

Q.—What, from a military standpoint, do you see Russia from war today?

A.—I think the West's widely dispersed bomber forces. Russia is known to have at least 1,000 liquidfuelled T2 rockets ready to fire at Western European nations. These are unreliable, too. And they will not wipe out all the bomber bases from which an immediate reply would come.

Large numbers of bombers are always in the air. A proportion would get through the best Russian defences.

Q.—So Britain's V-bomber force has a really important role to play?

A.—A vital role. But such bombers are not the only deterrent today. The West has literally thousands of tactical fighter bombers, capable of nuclear attack, spread all over the place from Turkey to Germany.

These, mixed up with V-bombers, B47's, B52's and others, would play havoc with any radar system (even these can be jammed) and no enemy could tell which was the faint attack and which was the real strike.

Q.—But doesn't the presence of Thors and V-bombers in Britain make us more of a priority target?

A.—I think not. Khrushchev knows he could be struck back from a hundred other places. Why then concentrate on one rather than others? The only mistake we make is in basing all our V-bombers in Britain, where they can easily be destroyed.

Bomber force

I would be far happier with a Commonwealth V-bomber force, dispersed in Australia and especially Canada. Then, even if ours went up in smoke, the rest could still hit back.

Q.—How long is the manned bomber likely to be thought a better weapon than the rocket?

A.—At least five, perhaps another 10 years. The accuracy and performance of solid-fuelled rockets must be guaranteed. On the face of it, it looks as though solid-fuelled rockets will be more reliable, and will certainly need less time to be fired.

But even these have the same problem: They cannot radio back the message "Target destroyed." In launching total nuclear war you cannot afford hours of uncertainty about the success of your attack.

Q.—How could this be avoided?

A.—The strategists say: "By observing from a number of satellites." But by the time we have manned satellites, I think we will have a far more deadly weapon than the land rocket, the satellite or the bomber—all of which in the air are so vulnerable.

Safe base

Q.—What is that?

A.—The solid-fuelled rocket fired from a submarine. That, I think, is the ultimate weapon. The submarine is a safe base, practically inviolate. It gives the rocket a flexible, mobile range.

At present it can only be detected at a few miles. I don't believe it will ever be possible to improve detection much. Even if it is, there is bound to be confusion on radar screens.

Q.—How near are we to this ultimate weapon?

A.—America with her 1,500-2,000 miles Polaris submarine solid rocket, and Russia with her Comot and Golem, are both at the stage of successful trial firing. But guidance must still be improved.

Q.—Who is leading this rocket race?

A.—America lags very slightly behind. But both have reached the brink of a breakthrough on the guidance problem. It is hard to pick between them, for all rocket development today compares with the state of the war-plane in the 1914-18 war.

Q.—Is Britain wasting her time, then, by pressing on with her liquid rocket blue streaks due to start firing trials in 1961?

A.—In a way, no. But I think it is unrealistic of Britain to addle with it, knowing she has not the cash to push through a proper development programme.

I would like to see Britain and America get together in the production of an ultimate weapon, as they did in developing the atom-bomb.

Q.—But when complete surprise attack is now virtually impossible, why race for the ultimate weapon?

A.—Because the submarine-rocket makes complete nonsense of war. It means that from below, as well as from above, the people in the middle can be potted at.

Nobody in the middle could gain. The Russians see the sense of that, too. That is why I believe their disarmament proposals at Geneva should be taken seriously, if slowly.

I am writing a book, examining the methods of making war next time. I am entitled it Ad Absurdum.

JACOBY on BRIDGE

SOUTH was tempted to go to seven no-trump after his partner showed two aces but he was a little worried about his fourth club and decided that seven hearts would be a better contract.

When he saw the dummy he decided to play the hand as if it were no-trump and proceeded to run off his high cards in the hope that either clubs would break, someone would discard long clubs or that a squeeze would develop.

None of that happened and when the smoke of battle had cleared away South was down one and the rubber was still going on.

South should have made the hand by taking advantage of the trump suit. The winning play would be to draw two rounds of trumps only and then go after the clubs. Since West held three trumps and four clubs South would have been able to trump his fourth club in dummy.

This play would have risked nothing. He could not lose the hand unless the player with the short clubs held the long trump and in that case he could not have made the hand anyway.

LOOK OUT FOR THIS FACE...it's the look we'll be seeing around

BY BARBARA GRIGGS

FORGET about fashion for the moment. The new Paris lines are still on the drawing boards. The shops are still selling off the last of their cottons.

And in this gentle pause between the heat-waves of July and the first frosts of September, any girl with sense is giving some thought to the one feature a man can go on looking and looking at—her face, and the hair that frames it. It was not, after all, Helen of Troy's hairline or her jolby skirt, her trim waist or her neat ankles that launched a thousand ships.

The prettiest faces this autumn will probably be the ones with least make-up—fresh, clear-cut and unexaggerated. Eyebrows are cleanly trimmed but not plucked out of existence. Lipstick is a clear, true red and does not blur over the outline of the lips. Eye shadow should be as faint as possible, and eye-lines almost invisible behind lashes.

The girl in the picture has abandoned the over-made-up, rings-around-the-eyes look that was never popular and is now out of date. And her hair is set for autumn in the line they are liking in Paris, in London and New York.

No more odd streaks and highlights. No more chopped-off arching cuts. No more big swelled out bouffant styles. Instead, hair is set smoothly down over the cheeks, from a central or side parting, and flipped up a little at the sides. The hairdresser higher on the crown and curls smoothly down into the nape of the neck.

For evening, he likes two variations on this basic length. First, the front of the hair still curves forward over the cheeks—but the sides are looped down behind and pinned down firmly, one across the other, to give a near-shingled look that is easier to achieve than a chin-noon.

Second, for strictly spectacular occasions, hair is pulled back

How Ambitious Can You Get?

IS your husband keen to get on? Does he intend to apply for a better job soon? Then, wives, take notice! For YOU might be the 'stumbling-block.'

That is, if a new idea catches on—the idea of calling wives for interview as well as their husbands.

A man applies for a job as a salesman, and is promptly told that his wife will have to appear for interview as well. It makes you think, housewife, doesn't it?

After all, it has long been quite commonplace in America for wives to be 'vetted' before their husbands are appointed to a post. Not only that, but employers there actually decide which neighbourhood a man should live in, which schools his children should attend.

And what they really do is decide how the salaries they pay should be spent.

A most unsatisfactory state of affairs, I say!

It would be very interesting to know what such employers look for in a wife.

The Right Type?

Should she be the plain, home-loving type who seldom grumbles, is complacent and not 'burned up' by ambition?

Or should she be the gay sophisticated, 'hell-bent' on climbing the social ladder, with a flair for entertaining?

I rather suspect that the latter is the 'wife' they have in mind. But who are they to say that she is the right type?

Influence

It's all grossly unfair. I don't doubt, however, that a wife has a great influence on her husband, and even possibly on how he does his work and how he succeeds socially. But it doesn't take a brilliant entertainer to have that sort of influence.

I don't think appointments should depend on wives in the slightest.

from the face and up from behind, to the crown of the head.

One fat coil of false hair is anchored round it, another plaited up and around it, to a height of as much as eight inches.

The girls at Dior wore their hair this way for evening. The effect—studied with jewels—was sensational.

Unpretentious

ENRICO CARUSO—his clients call him Rico—probably has a more star-studded clientele than any other hairdresser in the world.

He arrived in 1948—Ann

Sheldon was one of his first famous clients—and the famous faces that now flock into his salon include Anna Magnani, Marlene Dietrich, Zsa Zsa Gabor and Adele Astaire.

His success is due to a genuine desire to make women look prettier, an unpretentious manner (he loathes prima-donna hairdressers who consider themselves artists) and a wizard with the scissors.

Describing the then revolutionary idea of a short-cropped Italian cut to a magazine editor once in her office, he was given a model, handed a pair of cutting shears, and told: Do it! He did.

WE'LL HELP YOU Guard Your Treasure

By ELEANOR ROSS

WE'RE all art collectors nowadays, from the man who pays vast sums for a Van Gogh or Matisse to the girl who seeks an inexpensive original to give beauty and distinction to her room.

Not only paintings but sculpture and other art objects excite our interest. We buy carefully, select pieces that will gracefully into our decorating scheme. We place them where they will be a constant source of aesthetic satisfaction.

Pieces of sculpture are enormously popular and art museums report that fine reproductions are much sought after as holiday gifts.

The right site, the proper base and lighting, placed to bring out the beauty of the piece, is a challenge to the owner of good sculpture, a challenge that is smartly met by the majority of owners.

Pieces of sculpture are enormously popular and art museums report that fine reproductions are much sought after as holiday gifts.

Curators of major art galleries and museums are intensely interested in this phase of our culture and one of them has passed along some cogent rules for the care of sculptures.

He tells us that taking care of sculptures is basically a house-keeping matter. If the piece is kept clean, there'll be no need for a drastic cleaning problem. How to do this must be influenced by the sculpture material.

A bronze, for instance, should never be washed, since it can be corroded by water. It must be dusted constantly to keep its beauty undiminished.

Alabaster does not take to water. A cleaning fluid is recommended to keep this clean. No doubt the curator of your local museum or an art gallery dealer could suggest just what to use.

MARBLE AND IVORY

There is no trouble between marble and water. Marble can be washed with soap and water but should be well rinsed.

Ivory reacts to moisture and humidity by splitting. It can be cleaned by sponging with a half-and-half solution of water and alcohol and should be

General Tin Remembers

—One Day He Went Walking Through the Park—

By MAX TRELL

Knarf and Haid, the Shadow Children with the Turned-About Names, and also Teddy, the Stuffed Bear, and Hiawatha, the Small-Sized Wooden Indian, all crowded around General Tin, the Tin Soldier.

"Now what is it you all want?" asked General Tin, looking at them severely.

Resting on Musket

He was standing at the Playroom door and was resting on his musket. Usually he kept his musket over his shoulder, but it was now late at night and it was easier to stand it on the floor.

"Now what is it you all want?" he repeated.

"We'd like a story, dear General Tin," said Haid, in her sweetest voice.

General Tin frowned.

"Story! I never tell stories."

"Well, tell one now," said Teddy, the Stuffed Bear.

A Long Story

"A nice, long one," said Knarf.

"Begin please," said Hiawatha.

General Tin frowned again.

Then, seeing that his four friends did not appear to believe that he could not tell, or would not tell, a story, he finally coughed once or twice and cleared his throat, then began as follows:

"This all happened to me," he said. "I'll tell it to you just as it happened to me."

Walking Through Park

"One day I was walking through the park with a very pretty girl."

"Oh, that's lovely!" exclaimed Haid.

"It was a beautiful day," General Tin went on. "We both sat down under a shady chestnut tree."

"We were there for perhaps ten minutes when I heard something moving over my head in the branches of the tree. I looked up. It was the Squirrel. I fancied that he was looking down at us in an angry way."

Sparrow Came

"The next moment a Sparrow landed on the branch near the Squirrel."

"You look hungry, my friend," said the Sparrow to the Squirrel.

Squirrel Came

"Well," said General Tin, "when I ran after my hat, she got up and ran after me. And I'm quite sure the Squirrel ran down from the tree and got his chestnut."

"And what happened to the pretty girl?" asked Haid.

"Fine story," said Hiawatha, the Small-Sized Wooden Indian.

"You look hungry," said the Sparrow to the Squirrel.

"I am hungry," said the Squirrel to the Sparrow.

"Now that's odd," said the Sparrow to the Squirrel. "I thought you fellows always buried chestnuts and acorns in the ground like people put food in a pantry."

Sitting On It

"The Squirrel nodded."

"I've got a big, beautiful chestnut buried right at the foot of the tree. But I can't get at it. That Soldier with that pretty girl is sitting on it."

"I know what you ought to do," said the Sparrow to the Squirrel. "Here comes the breeze. Why don't you ask the breeze to blow the soldier off the spot where your chestnut is buried?"

"Sure enough the breeze came along and the Squirrel asked it to blow the Soldier—that's me—away from the spot where I was sitting. It got me away, all right."

Being out without its owner may mean the Bear is ill. It's not you'd better find out," says Mr. Bear. And off Rupert goes again, hoping to visit Rastus.

England Already On Way To Victory

And Record

INDIA DISMISSED FOR 140 ON FIRST DAY OF THE FIFTH TEST

London, Aug. 20.

After only one day in the fifth and final Test match, England are already on the way to victory against India and to a new record by winning all five Tests in a home series.

India returned to their bad ways by averaging only 28 runs an hour and were dismissed for 140, their smallest total of the series.

Then Raman Subba Row, opening the England batting for the first time, played through the last 45 minutes with Geoff Pullar. The pair scored 35 in reply.

There seems to be no reason why England should not build up a mammoth total to wind up a memorable season of sunshine and rain.

Once again the lack of a good pair of opening batsmen left the Indians with the England bowlers.

The day was made for batting. The sun blazed down from a cloudless blue sky and the pitch was fast and true.

The Indians were fortunate to win the toss, but, Packed Roy and the left-handed Nari Contractor took only five runs off the first six overs sent down by Freddie Trueman and Brian Statham and only 10 runs came in the first three-quarters of an hour.

Dropped A Sitter

England captain, Colin Cowdrey, then brought on Ted Dexter in the new bowler's first over, Ray Illingworth dropped a sitter from Roy in the gully. Roy did not profit by this escape, for Statham promptly knocked over his off-stump.

No Abbas Bala, the Oxford freeman, who had a brilliant century on his Test debut at Manchester, faced the responsibility of challenging the England bowlers.

He produced a glorious square cut off Dexter for the first boundary of the day after 65 minutes, and also drove Dexter through the field, but his effort to force the pace while Contractor remained almost strokeless cost him his wicket. He finished at 20 runs and was taken at second slip.

Apart from Statham, the England bowling was not impressive before lunch. But India, could make only 47 in two hours, of which Contractor's share was 16.

Altogether Contractor stayed three hours twenty minutes for 22, being seventh to leave at 74. It was one of the slowest individual Test innings on record and it certainly did little to further India's cause.

No Enterprise

One felt that the other batsmen failed to do themselves justice because Contractor showed no enterprise. He had been at the crease two and a half hours before he hit his solitary boundary by pulling Statham.

Contractor, R. G. Nair, Chandrabir, Datta, Gokhale and Java Ghorpade fell in 70 minutes after lunch while only 25 runs were added. Then, realising the desperate position of his side, Contractor tried to punish Dexter, only to give Illingworth a simple catch at cover.

Ironically enough for India, no sooner had Contractor departed than the fall showed their predecessors how they had squandered their opportunities.

Surendra Nath, the opening bowler, and Narendra Tamhane, the wicket-keeper, defied England for 85 minutes while putting on 58 for the eighth wicket in the best stand of the day. For the most part, however, they had made minor runs against an willing Tom Greenough, Ken Barrington and Dexter.

The New Ball

The new ball became due at 110 and it was surprising that Cowdrey did not take it immediately. Instead he allowed the leg-spinners to carry on for five more overs.

Then Trueman and Statham went into action again. Trueman, in his second over, broke the partnership by forcing Surendra Nath to edge to third slip. P. Tamhane, last out, was top scorer.

The England bowling produced a curious analysis in the fact that the four men each conceded 24 runs.

Greenough, who came into the side after David Allen, had been pronounced unfit, did an excessive amount of work, but no doubt the idea was to give him a thorough trial in view of the forthcoming West Indies tour. Greenough sent down 20 of his 20 overs between lunch and 1600 GMT during which he had only two brief rests.

Early in the day he was often inclined to pitch short, but in the mid-afternoon when the sun was fierce he found tantalising length and looked very troublesome.

Higher Plane

If England's fielding continued some blunders, because Trueman and Illingworth missed reasonable chances, Subba Row, Trueman and Cowdrey all made attempts to bring off almost impossible catches.

Pullar, the taller of the pair, definitely looked the part and continued the opening furnished of this at Leeds and Manchester.

Subba Row has yet to establish himself so high in the order. He has nothing seriously wrong and may well come into his own tomorrow when England will require only 105 runs behind and all their wickets standing. The official attendance was 13,000.

Oxford Rowing Crew Goes Into Action Against Japanese Teams Today

Tokyo, Aug. 20.

The Oxford rowing crew today completed its training programme for the three-day Japan rowing championships which open here tomorrow. The Oxford coach Mr H. R. A. Edwards said today, "The crew is in very good fettle and is extremely hopeful of doing well."

Mr Edwards said the crew tomorrow would be R. De Ver Green, A. Lindsay, I. Elliot, D. Rutherford, R. Howard, D. Edwards, D. Shaw, R. Lander (stroke) and J. Rowbotham (cox).

Oxford will compete against 34 Japanese teams over the straight 2,000-metre Tokyo course on the outskirts of Tokyo.

Olympic System

The team will row in the second of tomorrow's nine heats against Meiji Hoesel and Chuo Universities. The Oxford crew's heat is due to start at 1210 local (0310 GMT).

The championships will be held under the Olympic system. Third and fourth placed crews will advance to the final.

The Japanese crews he had seen were very good. They had a style of rowing something similar to the Russians. The style was devised to keep the boat moving along as smoothly as possible. Mr Edwards said the style was difficult to learn but if developed properly a crew could move very fast. He said Oxford used the traditional English style.

Impressed

The Oxford rowing style, particularly the blade work, quick recovery blow, forward movement and sharp turn impressed the Japanese rowers.

The Asahi newspaper said the crew had a good chance to win the championships.

Under this Act, it appears, there is no power for a lease to be granted for sporting purposes for more than 21 years—unless it is a lease for a term of years.

At any rate, the Southport and Ainsdale lease has 16 years to run and what the future will then hold, we do not know.

My information was that the land had been leased to the Southport and Ainsdale Golf Club, and that the lease was for 21 years.

With a new lease of life and their recent inclusion in the green belt, let us hope they will once again build up a team to put university sides in their place as they used to do in my day.

Thus ends a long period of uncertainty which has done much harm to one of the best known clubs, and certainly one of the best inland courses, in Southern England.

BERNARD JOY FINDS THAT £400,000 DOES NOT MEAN A FIGHT FOR POWER

Only The Hot-Heads Could Spark FA-League Clash

"A struggle for power with the Football Association? Rubbish!" said Football League president Joe Richards. "The League to take over the England team? Poppycock!" Mr President pushed his coffee cup away emphatically to reveal the strength of his feelings.

We were sitting in the office of the coking company, Richards, a 71-year-old Yorkshireman, runs near Barnsley. From the windows we could see the harsh outlines of the Yorkshire moors.

In Preston, where the League have their headquarters in a modest three-story brick building, the League's secretary, Alan Hardaker, who used to play for Yorkshire Amateurs and Hull as an amateur, was equally firm. He says: "There must be a governing body and that must be the FA."

The League have established closer relationships with Continental leagues, notably of Italy and France. And Hardaker says: "Inter-League games with them would be real money-spinners, but we do not propose to play such games yet, as the FA already have a full international programme."

So on the surface all is well. But underneath, the growing differences between the League and FA are the most explosive element in British football. A false move on either side could force a disastrous split between the cream of our professional football and the amateurs from whom they obtain some of their best players.

Irrisome

The situation would then be like that in Spain, where the big professional clubs are wealthy, glamorous outfits, bearing little resemblance to the rank and file of the game.

For some years the League have found the FA's control irrisome.

The League believe the FA would like a smaller League programme to leave more scope for internationals.

Some clubs want to keep all internationals even that against Scotland in mid-week.

The League are already strongly represented on the FA council. Seven of the nine members of the Senior International Selection Committee are from the League -- including chairman Joe Morris, the Chelsea chairman.

Now the League have had a sudden increase in strength. They have added to their £400,000 a year. They will amount to between £2,000,000 and £4,000,000 in the next ten years, and make the League the most powerful sporting body in the world.

Some hot-heads believe this is the weapon for taking over supreme control.

Big Advances

They would brook no interference from the FA, take over discipline, coaching and rule-making and appoint one of the top men like Stan Cullis or Billy Wright to run the international side.

But while Richards and Hardaker, who have brought tremendous advances in their two years of League rule, continue in office, and Sir Stanley Horn is secretary of the FA, there is little likelihood of any false steps.

For instance, after the three defeats in South America in May, the FA will limit tours to every other year. In return the League has agreed to an extra international match away from home in the autumn.

But they will not permit the season to be interrupted to allow an autumn tour.

Next Step

I forecast that the next major step will be to split the duties of England team manager and coaching director, both of which are at present held by Walter Winterbottom. The League rightly feel that there is too much work in both posts.

The League do not want to divide the FA control, but to divide the roles, having one set for professionals and another for amateurs.

They have a scheme for "football apprentices" which would enable clubs to sign boys from school. At present no League club may make any sort of approach—directly or indirectly.

But under the apprenticeship scheme, the boys could become professional at 17 and revert to their amateur status a year later if they realised they were not good enough.

Yet already before the scheme has been finalised a county FA has protested. The League consider this protest is the sort of "petty-minded interference" which holds back progress.

I HAVE MET

By ARCHIE QUICK

Tommy Tucker was a real old time boxer, one of those "pugs" typified in faded sporting prints with an upright stance and arms to match.

But this Lancashire heavy-weight, who died this week at the comparatively early age of 57, turned to one distinction—he took part in the last twenty rounds contest ever held in Great Britain. It was a winning fight against a Jack Marshall at Liverpool in 1931.

Tommy's real name was Fletcher, but he was called Tucker because, he looked like a Tommy Tucker. He was a barrel-shaped, honest-to-goodness pedestrian tradesman, but he did reach as high as a bout with Ben Fournier in 1932 when the wayward South African was heavyweight champion of Great Britain and the Empire. Tommy lost in the third round, retired from the ring, and for the last quarter of a century has been a publican at Bamber Bridge, near Preston.

Crowd Pleaser

He did have one or two all-in wrestling bouts after that, but, as he once confessed in his forthright Northern way, "the most difficult part of that lark is learning the moves at rehearsal!"

In this day and age when batters shy at more than one cent a year, it is interesting to note that Tucker had thirteen fights in 1929, fourteen the following year, seventeen in 1931 and twelve in 1932.

He was most of these, but never inspired to being anything more than a good second-rater who could always be relied upon to give the public a show for their money—what the boxing fraternity call "a crowd pleaser". I remember seeing Tucker fight at Wandsworth (London) round about 1930 against a Canadian named Del Fontaine.

Top of the bill was an up-and-coming Welshman named Tommy Farr against a wild cowboy, Eddie Wentob. Farr beat his man all right, but Tucker and Fontaine fought a draw.

Hung For Murder

The Canadian was an odd type, and in this bout he was content to play cat and mouse with poor Tucker. How the Lancastrian ever got a share of the decision I shall never know, for Fontaine was always master.

At the end he was livid, and threw as fine a ring tantrum as I ever saw. The referee, the seconds and anyone else at hand were in danger. Fontaine must have gone berserk at a later date, for he was eventually hung for murder!

Perhaps Tucker's finest victories were over George Clough, of Blackburn, for I remember it that time Clough was being talked of as a future champion. The pair met three times, and Tommy won on each occasion, once by a third round knock-out, once on a foul and once on points. He never did better after that.

WOLVES CAN OPEN SEASON WITH AWAY WIN OVER BIRMINGHAM CITY

The £500,000 Soccer season starts tomorrow with the promise of a New Deal for players and spectators alike. Thanks to the money rolling in from the Pools for the League's fixture list copyright, the 1959-60 season may well prove a milestone in football history, but of more immediate moment is who plays who on the important opening day.

What a curtain-raiser for the Midlands! League Champions from Wolverhampton visit neighbouring Birmingham City, and glamorous Manchester United are at West Bromwich. I think it will be a home win for West Bromwich and an away victory for Wolves in those two attractive clashes.

Cup holders Nottingham Forest go to Manchester City's ground, and their brand of football should be worth a point, while drawn games could be forced by Spurs, Preston and Burnley at Newcastle, Chelsea and Leeds.

Promoted Fulham and Sheffield Wednesday make critical reappearances in Division One, and while Fulham should be good enough to account for Blackburn, Wednesday may meet with defeat at Arsenal. The rest of the home teams should win: Blackpool v. Bolton, Everton v. Luton and West Ham v. Leicester.

Interest in Division Two centres round relegated Portsmouth and Aston Villa. They both have to go visiting, and it is just possible that neither will win. They may, however, snatch a division of points at Middlesbrough and Brighton respectively.

Promoted Sides

The two promoted sides, Hull and Plymouth, meet in Yorkshire, and home advantage should just give it to the City. Liverpool will probably have a big say in the promotion race this time, and they look good for a point at Cardiff.

Most likely away winners are Charlton and Bristol City at Rotherham and Scunthorpe respectively, but otherwise it looks a good day for the home clubs — Bristol Rovers v. Orient, Ipswich v. Huddersfield, Sheffield United v. Derby, Stoke v. Sunderland and Swansea v. Lincoln.

Relegated Barnsley and Grimsby start their Third Division ventures with home matches, but while Grimsby should beat Chesterfield, Barnsley may drop a point to Brentford.

Up from Division Four come Coventry, Shrewsbury, York and Port Vale—two of them are away, two at home. York may force a draw at Bradford City, but Port Vale will probably be defeated at Reading. Coventry and Shrewsbury should beat Mansfield and Burnmouth.

Cup 'Giant-Killers'

Everyone will be watching to see if Norwich City can carry on from where they left off last season, and it should not be beyond these Cup "giant-killers" to save a point at Southampton.

Southend look set for maximum away points at Halifax, and Colchester could do likewise at Bury, with Newport possibly drawing at Wrexham, but after that the home teams should gather in full points—QPR v. Swindon, and Tranmere v. Accrington.

Scottish League

If away points are to be had in Division Four they are most likely to go to Rochdale at Southport, and Palace at Carlisle, but it is very much a home's programme, and a 100 per cent home sequence could be set up by Barrow v. Darlington, Exeter v. Northampton, Gillingham v. Gateshead, Hartlepool v. Aldershot, Millwall

THE TANGO TIPPERARY STYLE

—ON TOP OF THE TABLE

THEY tangoed on the tables. Champagne fizzed over the floor. Scarlet-coated huntmen pranced, screeched, and rock 'n' rolled.

It was the Tipperary Hunt Ball—the first rhindig in Dublin's Royal Horse Show week.

Ice buckets became Rugby balls and peekaboo half-styled deb's delightedly joined in the scrimmages.

And in the early hours of the morning the party exploded; with champagne—flowing as steadily as the River Liffey—being carefully directed on to the heads of yelling dancers below the balcony.

Waiters at the five-star hotel were told to get tough. They better-skattered between water-throwing groups and were drenched for their trouble.

A stiletto-heeled girl joined in the high jinks and high-stepped precariously along narrow banisters flanking chicken-banked tables.

It was a party I just couldn't miss. I watched as the purple-coated, nine-piece band struck up—and saw Sean Darley take pretty Caroline Edwards Collins from Cornwall up on the table to tango.

As she danced she filled her glass from a champagne bottle swinging in her left hand.

Horsewoman Dawn Wofford watched her husband being drenched in water by a member of the visiting Spanish horse-riding team.

Lord Donoughmore, master of the Tipperary Hunt, dodged the spray to greet guests.

Handsome Spanish horse-riever Francisco Goyazco whistled Paula, his lovely wife of a few days, and shouted to me: "This is a honeymoon to remember."

Then it was 2 a.m., and—looking more tired than usual—deb's sipped champagne and sat on the floor.

A chicken leg whistled by my ear and I found myself in the centre of another battle. It ended when a block of ice was tipped down a girl's neck.

At one table £37 worth of champagne was drunk—or thrown—and the waiter would not allow the guests to leave until the father of the leader of the party came down to settle the bill.

But the man who, I think, had the best time of all was wealthy Canadian Howard Al Byers.

He stripped off his dinner jacket to dance solo round the floor.

He sang and shouted and conducted the orchestra.

He jumped on the bandstand to play the piano as the deb's and their escorts crowded round.

Then he rounded it all off by picking up two beautiful girls and swinging them round in the centre of the floor.

After the ball was over...

Still drinking

That bill

UNEXPECTED GUEST

THE guest I least expected to see slipped quietly into the wedding of a Governor's daughter.

Ann Rendlen, 20-year-old daughter of Sir Patrick Rendlen, Governor of British Guiana, was married at Chelsea with a top-hat-and-tails brigade from the Colonial Service watching.

Sitting quietly among them—Dr. Cheddi Jagan, Guiana's political firebrand and the man who has made his reputation as a thorn in the side of the British administration.

Understandably, perhaps, he craved the Knightsbridge reception.

Dr. Jagan told me later: "I am very friendly with Sir Patrick, personally. But you know I am a politician first and foremost and I don't stand for all this social chit-chat."

"I went to the wedding as a friend. I planned to go to the reception but there was such a big crush I didn't go in."

Retriever

IT seems at first a completely pointless pursuit—London banker Henry Marks teeing off golf balls on the beach at Biarritz, carefully addressing them, then driving them with rigid precision into the sea.

But Mr Marks is not quite so frivolous, or profligate, as it appears.

Having disposed of a dozen or so balls, he takes up his under-water fishing gear and swims off to try to recover them.

His losses to date amount, I believe, to about 20 balls.

His general physical condition, however, is much improved.

AFTER a "schoolchildren's special" flight had arrived in Lagos, Benin, in London re-lates this message: "Following items found on Bose Flight 259: One black and white school jacket, one tie, name-tag, Morgan; one madhouse; and one book 'How To Avoid Matrimony.'"

"We were all pretty shaken up. I only hope this won't spoil my week for the rest of the hunt balls."

And to tell the truth I am sometimes a bit fed up with it myself. Naturally, I will be glad when it is finished—but I doubt whether I will live here much of the time.

"I am really at my happiest when I am staying in a simple little house that I have as a retreat in the hills near Grassie—and I will still spend as much time as possible there."

The new villa, overlooking Golfe Juan, is certainly no "simple little retreat." Three storeys high, it has a swimming pool, a large games room, a private cinema, a Turkish bath—and even a cold-storage room designed specially for fur coats.

With the sole exception of Sir Duncan's private study—which has a parquet floor—every floor and staircase, inside and outside, is paved with marble.

Julie went on: "Of course, I think I'm enormously better than when I started on Broadway. Sometimes I play the record we made two weeks after we opened there. I'm not very pleased with that now."

I said she must now be one of the country's wealthiest young actresses.

She told me: "I don't know how much I'm worth. But I make a point of understanding what is happening to my money."

"I hold a few investments. Not in stocks and shares. In insurance policies."

"But I don't think I'm tight-fisted with money. I bought a mink coat. It wasn't a full-length mink but it was mink."

"We haven't a car, although I hold a licence. But Tony (husband Tony Walton) holds the important licence. The marriage one."

I thought what a very real insight into Julie Andrews this was. Then she said softly: "Sometimes I think my car came too soon. I feel that I'm continually running to catch up."

"Now 'My Fair Lady' is over—over for me, anyway. In some way it is really the beginning."

Fed Up With The Home They've Never Lived In

SIR DUNCAN ORR-LEWIS, the retired Canadian banker, who has spent two years and more than £100,000 on building a most luxurious villa in the South of France, now tells me: "Quite frankly, if I were to receive a decent offer for the villa tomorrow I would sell it like a shot."

He explains: "The building has taken too long. It should be completed by Christmas, but my wife, instead of being excited at the prospect of moving in, has completely lost interest in it."

"And to tell the truth I am sometimes a bit fed up with it myself. Naturally, I will be glad when it is finished—but I doubt whether I will live here much of the time."

BY THE WAY

by Beachcomber

I GATHER that the recent traction-engine rally near Northampton included "an egg-and-spoon race in which tennis balls balanced in wooden spoons were strapped to the front of the vehicle."

Might I, as an experienced piano-tuner, suggest for next year a three-legged race for two traction engines with two of their front wheels tied together? Or a game of tennis played from traction engines, the drivers using eggs instead of tennis balls? At the Chelmsford Rally in 1957 two teams of 11 traction engines took part in a tug-of-war using a huge elastic band as a rope. The less said about all this sort of thing the better.

Down to their last car

I F the Maldstone councillors succeed in their demands for extra pay for going to church, could there not be a special collection for them at any service they attended? If the response were niggardly, the rates could be increased, and a public subscription opened to raise money for them. An expensive allowance for church-going clothes would also be popular. No decent Maldstone resident wants to see his councillors playing the church for pennies outside town, or sitting on the pavement among their chink drawings, and holding out their tattered caps for coins of a disgracefully low denomination.

Is Foulenough going North?

THE question being asked in shooting circles is whether Captain Foulenough intends to travel North for the drinking this August. Last year the moor owned by the Macaroon of Macaroon was a disgrace to grouse-lovers. Thanks to a merry party, which included sitting on the pavement among their chink drawings, and holding out their tattered caps for coins of a disgracefully low denomination.

Rubber Market Review

Singapore, Aug. 20. The market was marked up at the opening on improved overseas advices and ruled steady with trading brisk. However, profit-taking at higher levels brought prices down and reduced their levels.

During unofficial trading hours more trade demand steadied the market slightly and some off-grade enquiry met at slightly wider differentials than of late.

In New York, the Rex rubber futures today closed 20 to 50 points higher on sales of 133 contracts.

Today's gains pointed up the tight spot rubber situation in New York. Primary markets also finished firm.

In shipment rubber, bark for November was offered at 33 1/2 cents and one sheet for September were done at 37 cents.

The spot price for No. 1 Rex was quoted at 40 cents. In London, the rubber market was steady with spot quoted at 32 1/2 pence per pound.—UPI.

Exchange Rates

Business was done in the local exchange market this morning at the following rates:

U.S. dollars (per $1)	0.73
Starling notes (per £1)	10.30
Australian notes (per £1)	12.01
Indonesian rupiah (per 100)	3.30
Sum. (100)	20.30
Singapore (Straits)	1.03

Lane, Crawford which for the past two weeks had been rising on demand, gradually eased off and closed at $21.30.

Realities firmed up on promises of a good Chairman's report to be delivered at the annual meeting on Tuesday, August 25.

After nearly a month of continued demand, both Banks and Unions eased off at the close on lack of interest.

Although Utilities were well traded in there was little movement in prices.

Textiles were neglected with no movement.

Hongkong Lands were well supported.

Substantial Gains On Wall Street

New York, Aug. 20.

The market rallied with a vengeance today with rises adding around $4 billion to market valuations.

Steels, aluminum and rail issues combined to give the market one of its best gains in two months. Hedges for a steel settlement and some favourable corporate developments sparked the strong rally.

Volume picked up late in the day as the market extended its gains. This was interpreted as a bullish sign in Wall Street and led more brokers to suggest the recent correction has run its course.

Southern Pacific ran up more than seven points in the rally at its high on a dividend increase and a proposed 3-for-1 stock split. It backed down from the high just before the close. Standard Brands was strong for the same reasons.

A. O. Smith ran ahead on favourable dividend news. A stock split sent Automatic Control up more than four points. Gains of one to two points dotted the oils, motors, rails, chemicals, electronics, drugs,

Israel To Start Building Her Own Oil Pipeline

Jerusalem, Aug. 21.

Israel will soon begin construction work to complete a 16-inch Red Sea-Mediterranean pipeline — which will by pass the Suez Canal and will be the first oil supply system in the Middle East not subject to Arab control.

The financial aspects of the plan, which have been approved by the Israeli Knesset (Parliament), involve the largest foreign investment thus far recorded in the young country's rapid economic growth.

According to an agreement signed with the Israeli Government, Tricontinental Pipelines Ltd. (Canada) and Elal Pipelines Ltd. (Israel) obtain a $24,000,000 49-year concession for the pipeline which eventually will carry 5,800,000 tons of oil per year 270 miles overland from the Red Sea port of Eilat to Haifa on the Mediterranean.

ACTUAL COST

The actual cost of the concession is only $4,000,000. In return the investors are receiving an attractive guarantee.

The Israeli Government promises a local consumption of 1,600,000 tons of oil per year for 15 years at transportation costs which will assure a return of eight per cent after taxes every year. The investors will recoup their original outlay within the 15 years.

At the end of the 49-year concession period, the Israeli Government has the option of taking over the pipeline.

The concession begins on July 1, 1960, by which time it is expected the annual capacity of the line will be 1,700,000 tons. In March 1961, the capacity should be up to 2,000,000 tons.

The history of this overland oil route is a recent one. It began with the Sinai campaign of 1956 when Israel opened the Straits of Tiran from Eilat into the Red Sea and out into the Indian Ocean.

At this time, Israel attempted to get foreign backing for construction of a pipeline, but foreign capital was not willing to take the risk.

WENT IT ALONE

So Israel went it alone and with her own resources laid a 146-mile line across the Negev wastes to BeSheva and then a further 60 miles to the newly built port of Ashdod.

Later, a 16-inch pipe was laid from BeSheva via Ashdod to Haifa on the Mediterranean. The pipe was almost sufficient for Israel's own needs.

Then Israel again looked for foreign support to lay a 16-inch Negev pipeline which would not only supply Israel but carry an oil surplus which could be exported to Europe.

Are the Gospels really true?

And when He had spoken these things, while they beheld, He was taken up; and a cloud received Him out of their sight.

So ends the story which is still, after nineteen centuries, the strangest ever told—the story given us in the four small books called the Gospels.

Nothing else in human history has provoked so much discussion. Nothing else has inspired such long-lasting passions and disputes. Nothing else has raised so many questions.

Yet all the questions come back finally to a single one. Did these things really happen? Are the Gospels true?

New facts

It might seem that by now every possible argument has been fought out to the end. But this is not so. Discoveries are still being made. Researches even within the last decade have put much of the story in a new light.

Convinced that there is no substitute for study on the spot, the China Mail Commission has sent a team of authors to the Holy Land to see for themselves the places where the world-changing events took place. He has tried to fit in what he found with the best modern scholarship, and has formed his own picture of what actually happened.

The journey led him into fresh ways of thinking. In his articles he shows how the realities of the Holy Land helped him to restate his own answer to the great question.

Seven More Multi-Storey Blocks For Jordan Valley

Work will begin in the very near future on the final stage of the development of the Jordan Valley Resettlement Estate, in the Ngautaukok area of Kowloon.

The Army recently announced that Comet tanks would be scrapped. A number were subsequently sold at auction and this picture, released by the Army PRO this morning shows men at work stripping the tanks for scrap merchants. The Comets are being replaced by Centurion tanks.

The first phase of the building programme, providing 2,800 domestic units for about 14,000 people and 270 working units in 188 self-contained flats is expected to be completed next February.

The second and final stage will provide 1,500 domestic units for some 7,000 people in seven multi-storey blocks, each seven storeys high.

Two Schools

When completed, at the end of September next year, the new resettlement estate will have accommodation for 21,000 people in 188 self-contained flats as well as 270 working units.

Two schools will be housed on the ground floors of two of the seven blocks. Tenders for the construction of these seven blocks are called for in today's Government Gazette.

For the second time, inverted U-type precast concrete slabs will be used in the erection of resettlement buildings.

The slabs are 9½ feet long, twelve inches wide and four inches thick and they will be used entirely for the flooring.

He is Mr Derek Bromhall, Chief Scientific Officer of the Unit. He leaves for Oklahoma and later New York today.

The conference will be the biggest yet held by the IOC. It has been sponsored by the American Association for the Advancement of Science in co-operation with Unesco.

Hundreds of delegates from many countries, including Soviet Russia, will be attending. Some of the world's leading experts on oceanography will be addressing the meeting.

Main Purpose

While the main purpose of his trip is to attend the conference, Mr Bromhall said he would also take advantage of the chance to follow up his scheme of an oceanarium for Hongkong.

Speaking of his plans to get information regarding oceanariums in general, Mr Bromhall said, "The people I want to meet are those I can discuss technicalities with. In doing this I will try and visit four or five American oceanariums and talk to the technicians so

Young Amah Tells Of Attack In Kowloon Lane

A young amah told the Coroner in Kowloon Court this morning that she had pulled something from the back of her boy-friend, after they had been attacked by two men in a side-lane in Kowloon, on February 3.

The man, Chow Hau-to, 25, died in hospital. A triangular tile was later found by the Police on the scene, the coroner, Mr A. Dargan was told.

Dr T. M. Teoh, Police Forensic Pathologist, testified that the deceased had died from loss of blood and injuries caused by a triangular object similar to the triangular tile exhibited in court.

Accosted

The girl who was with the deceased at the time of the attack, Lum King-man, 23, said that she and her boy-friend were walking along the side-lane near Cumberland Road, when they were suddenly accosted by two unknown men.

She said she had been pushed aside and the deceased had then been attacked. She said she had shouted for help and suddenly the two men ran away, in opposite directions.

One of their attackers retraced his steps and ran past them again. At that time the deceased was staggering about and nearly fell down. She said that she had supported him, but when she put her arm around him, she felt something sticking into his back.

She pulled it out with one hand and without looking at it, threw it onto the ground. She could not tell what it was. Later she heard foot-steps and saw two policemen approaching.

'Stay There'

Witness said she told the policemen what had happened. The police told her to stay where she was, while they tried to apprehend the attackers, but without success.

Det. Insp. T. E. Monnington is conducting the hearing which will be concluded this afternoon.
